

How to fund Renzulli Learning for your school or district. At $15 per student per year, most districts fund it through federal and state programs they already receive. Because the platform now assesses, develops, and documents durable skills, it qualifies for several major funding streams. Powered by Renzulli Learning.

Funding Sources for Renzulli Learning

Source	How Renzulli Learning Qualifies
Title I, Part A	Raises achievement for students in high-poverty schools; research shows reading and achievement gains for at-risk and low-income students.
Title II, Part A	Funds professional development; the free Renzulli Certified Educator course builds teacher capacity in differentiation and strength-based instruction.
Title III	Supports English learners; the Profiler works in 20+ languages and ELLA delivers bilingual enrichment for emergent bilingual students.
Title IV, Part A (SSAE)	Funds well-rounded education and the effective use of technology, exactly the categories a durable-skills platform falls under.
Perkins V	Funds career exploration and CTE; interest-based career exploration and durable-skill development align to Perkins V priorities.
Gifted & Talented Allocations	Funds gifted identification and programming; multiple-measure identification and enrichment built on the Schoolwide Enrichment Model.
State-Specific Grants	Literacy, enrichment, and career readiness grants; aligns to state Portrait of a Graduate, career readiness, and MTSS frameworks.

New: Fund From Your Assessment & Testing Budget

A funding avenue that is new for Renzulli Learning. Because the platform includes validated assessments, it qualifies for a district's assessment and testing budget, the line that pays for cognitive, creativity, and identification instruments.

Why It Qualifies	Detail
A validated assessment	The Cebeci Test of Creativity (US Patent 12,087,176) is a patented instrument with established psychometrics, administrable in the home language, exactly what an assessment budget funds.
A second measure for ID	Most gifted policies require multiple measures. The CTC provides a validated second measure of creativity that complements cognitive and achievement tests.
A full suite, one line item	The purchase also delivers the Renzulli Profiler and the Executive Function, Leadership, and Critical Thinking assessments, a full set of strength-based measures.
Assessment plus platform	Unlike a standalone test, the same budget line also delivers enrichment, PBL, and the Total Talent Portfolio that develop and document what the assessments reveal.

Note: ESSER and ARP (one-time COVID-relief funds) have reached their deadlines and are no longer available for new purchases. Districts are transitioning to the sources above.

Make the Case: Three High-Value Uses

Program	How to Fund It
Gifted & Talented	Fund through gifted state and local allocations, and Title I for gifted and high-potential students in underserved schools. Our G&T Alignment by State pages document how the platform meets each state's mandate, supporting the funding request.
Underserved Students (Title I)	Title I, Part A brings strength-based enrichment to high-poverty schools, raising achievement and surfacing overlooked talent through the Profiler in 20+ languages, for the whole special-populations basket.
Portrait of a Graduate	Fund through Title IV-A (well-rounded education, technology) and Perkins V (career readiness). The platform assesses, develops, and documents the durable skills a Portrait defines. Our Career Readiness Alignment by State pages help build the case.

Grassroots & Community Funding

Source	How It Works
PTO / PTA	Parent organizations fund the platform directly. A whole-school enrichment benefit parents can see, easy to rally behind.
Donations & Sponsorships	Local businesses, foundations, and donors sponsor a grade, classroom, or building; a per-student price makes it simple.
Foundation & Private Grants	Community foundations and national grants fund enrichment, gifted programming, and career readiness. We help frame the application.
Classroom Crowdfunding	Platforms like DonorsChoose let teachers raise funds for a classroom license, an approachable, fundable request.
